The Outlook in Tennessee.

With the Tennessee debt question, the Tennessee Republicans have played with as a ball, and that there was no time when they were not prepared to take the side of it which premised to pay best. Only the Tennessee Democrats have been divided and purposeless, exciting thems selves over details, which, at a distance, not trouble curselves with the complicabelongs to the Legislature. Taking little stock in the local portions of the platform adopted by the late Democratic convention, which, indeed, do not concern us, the Courier Journal will amount of free-trade. I Padwah Time the Courier Journal will support the nomination and election of Gon. Bate Tennessee. The convention which nominated him was undoubtedly a regular, authorized and representative Democratic body. He is himself an orthodox Democrat of unquestioned integrity and ability. If the bolters put a ticket in the field, they cannot hope to get the tithe of the Democratic vote, and their object can one by the the election of Hawkins. With such a scheme no Democrat can sympathize, and we are sure that before the 11th of July, the time appointed for the bolters' conference, these of them who are really are described as a conference, these of them who are really are described as a conference, these of them who are really are described as a conference, these of them who are really are described as a conference, these of them who are really are described as the Congressional struggle, and it may therefore reasonably hope to have the sympathy and ossistance of all who look with dread, upon the possibility of the restoration of the Democration of the Democration of the Democration of the Government.

The Farmers' Journal directs attention to a significant fact, that seems to have quite escaped public attention, in connection with the tax on distilled spirits, viz.: that whisky which is used as a beverage, and is at best but a luxury, pays but about one half the tax per gallon that is paid by alcohol, which enters into the arts and manufactures and is a chemical agent of inestimable value. The explanation is that whisky is only about one-half the strength or proof of Many seem to think that a high tax tends to lessen the use of spirits as a beverage. This view, however, does not seem to be sustained by the facts or the statistics of the Revenue Department. Before the tax was put upon spirits fully Sper cent. of all that was made was used in the arts and in manufacturing. Now early all that is made appears to be cons med as a beverage. Before the days of the tax alcohol was extensively used in prepring dyes for calico, carpets, etc. It is also largely used by furniture manufacturers, varnish makers, hatters, druggists and in many other industries. Now who wer it is possible substitutes are employed, such as wood spirits and fusel oil, with have an objectionable odor and are rank poisons.

It is estimated by those to that at least 16,000,000 gallons of alcoh would be used in the above industries. This would create a market for over 4.00,000 bushels of grain, while it is furniclaimed that the Government would suffer no loss of revenue. 3 per cent. of all that was made was suffer no loss of revenue.
